Utility of bite-force data during the first 3 years of life for identifying preclinical osteonecrosis of the femoral head. The Osteonecrosis Trauma in Childhood (ON-TIC) study was a prospective, longitudinal, multicenter study of children at high risk of developing osteonecrosis. Children studied included those with Legg-Calvé-Perthes disease, Legg-Calvé-Perthes syndrome, slipped capital femoral epiphysis, and slipped capital femoral epiphysis and Legg-Calvé-Perthes disease, as well as some patients who were at high risk of developing osteonecrosis. In this study we assessed the ability of radiographic-grade femoral head maturation, hip muscle size, and daily peak bite force to detect new bone lesions and to predict those lesions that will progress to collapse of the femoral head. The results from the ON-TIC study can be applied to clinical practice if they are used to identify children at high risk of having osteonecrosis.Q: PHP PDO
