THE MAKEUP ARTIST HANDBOOK: Techniques for Film, Television, Photography, and Theatre. a page from the handbook of Makeup in Hollywood. www.benjaminmoores.com Literature. In case you are a fan of colors, geometry and beauty (or just a lover of beautifully-written things), you must have learned about the brilliant colored volumes at the Museum of Modern Art in New York. As the title suggests, the books are organized by color. Whether you like the bronze and white tones of John Szarka's "Composition" or the blue tones of the brilliant colorist W. Eugene Smith, you will find dozens of references to great artists, their backgrounds and their work in the Museum's now out of print encyclopedia. It will take you about 10 days to familiarize yourself with the book in the museum library. We looked for a similar handbook that we could use as a reference, however, we found none. We decided to organize and publish one of our own, to fill in the gaps left in the museum's book. In this, we succeeded! In the first volume we used biographical information to explain the techniques, their history and their creators. In the second, and the most essential, we would present the techniques and methods. We've gone in-depth with many processes, and we've even created a few of our own. You can now buy your very own copy of The Makeup Artist Handbook from any source online and read it on any device you like. We've only just scratched the surface of the material available in the book, and we hope you will use it as a reference and model yourself after it. We are certain
