An extensive study of the structure of a DNA monomer using neutral mass spectrometry, collisionally induced dissociation, and stable isotope labeling for fragmentation mass spectrometry methods. A neutron-rich pyrimidine-dimer DNA monomer was analyzed by electrospray ionization, collisionally induced dissociation (CID), and <sup>15</sup>N-stable isotope labeling for CID (SI-CID) mass spectrometry (MS) methods. The tandem MS (MS(2) ) spectra of [u6A3T] on CID and SI-CID were compared to investigate the inherent differences between the two MS fragmentation mechanisms. The major fragmentation pathways are the same for both CID and SI-CID but the difference lies in the contribution of the second-stage fragmentation to the observed pattern of product ions. In CID, only one neutral loss (singly charged H (B)-loss) from the <sup>13</sup>C- and <sup>15</sup>N
