Powermat is a charging system that can be attached to a device with its built-in cable – without having to unplug it. The technology is based on a simple principle – when connected to a power source, the first thing the system does is find the devices to be charged and then it only tries to power up one device at a time, charging it until it's full. Needless to say, this system saves you time – not having to disconnect your tablet and laptop from the wall socket can save you a lot of time, especially if you're doing your work while sitting on a train. It also makes for a more comfortable working environment, as you're not constantly having to pull out your charger from your bag, and you can connect it to your smartphone and tablet while you're on your laptop. In addition to being able to charge your smartphone, tablet and laptop at the same time, this technology can also provide USB power to some of your other devices. It supports all USB devices – from mice and keyboards,
