Keymacro is a lightweight application designed to be used in combination with Keyboard Maestro macros in Microsoft Windows. Its main features include the extension of macros with a mouse click and the application's ability to apply different actions to single and multiple keystrokes. The latter can be useful when you want to define a macro for the Shift, Alt, and Ctrl keys. By default, Keymacro consists of a macro recording feature that supports both standard keyboard inputs and keystrokes originating from the combination of more than two modifier keys (e.g., Shift + Alt). It can also export recorded macros for direct import into other applications (e.g., the MS Office suite). Keymacro enables you to create macros based on a predefined sequence of keystrokes, which makes it useful for performing repetitive tasks, editing multimedia files, and other types of functionality. If you use keystrokes from the combination of more than two modifier keys, Keymacro enables you to easily create macros that execute an action when pressing a specific combination of keys and, therefore, quickly perform repetitive tasks. Macros created in this manner are useful when you have frequent need to perform the same operations, but you have difficulty remembering the exact keyboard combination. In addition, they are especially helpful when you need to execute certain actions while working with various types of files. Other interesting features include the support of special formatting options when editing multimedia files, including the use of various text attributes (bold, italic, and underline). KEYMACRO Requirements: Keymacro is freeware software distributed under the GNU General Public License. It can be used with any version of Microsoft Windows and is compatible with both 32-bit and 64-bit systems. The application requires a minimum of 1 MB of free disk space and can be downloaded here: Keymacro User Interface: Keymacro offers a clean interface that includes three main categories: Options, Macros, and Preferences. The Options tab is designed to configure the application and includes the following settings: • Memory usage: this is a simple feature that enables you to specify how much RAM Keymacro will use while running. • Keyboard Preferences: this settings tab enables you to define the input sequence that will be used when Keymacro is executed. • Keyboard Shortcut: this setting enables you to create shortcuts for the predefined macros. • Shortcut
